

Innovation & Creativity

The powerful reprimand of Montfort, “if you do not take risks for God, you will do nothing great for him,” had its impact on the options and commitments of his followers all through history. Following this lead, Montfortian education seeks new frontiers, breaks new ground in perceptions, walks along unfamiliar paths, and forms citizens of a new world in the making.

In this workshop, participants will hear from other schools, and share about their own creative and innovative practices and programmes. Participants will also get to network and identify with groups with similar vision to enable future collaboration to enable this aspect of the MEC to shine. Some of the guiding questions are:

1. What were the innovations that you have done?
2. What do you think needs some creativity to make learning come alive?
3. What’s one word that comes to mind when we say “Creativity and Innovation”?
